Potential Delays on Pacific Coast Highway and Tuna Canyon Road for Slope Repair Project

Tuna Canyon Road temporarily opens to two-way traffic for construction equipment on Monday

Malibu – The California Department of Transportation (Caltrans) will begin a slope restoration project west of Tuna Canyon Road in the city of Malibu next week to repair an eroded slope above Pacific Coast Highway (State Route 1).

From July 23, 2018 through September 23, 2018, the one-way portion of Tuna Canyon Road will be temporarily made two-way via a traffic control flagging operation to accommodate heavy-duty equipment only to enter the work site. Tuna Canyon Road will remain restricted to one-way traffic for motorists who can expect five to seven-minute delays. Motorists travelling on PCH may experience brief delays as well.

Work will be performed during regular weekday working hours between 7 a.m. – 7 p.m. There will be no closures of PCH for this project.

All work is weather permitting and subject to change.

Procon Builders Inc. of Chatsworth, Calif. is the contractor.

Caltrans reminds drivers to be “Work Zone Alert” and to “Slow for the Cone Zone.”
